

Athletic Director Job Description

What is an athletic director?

An athletic director oversees the functioning of sports programs in schools and other institutions.

What does an athletic director do?

Athletic directors organize and manage all important projects of a sports program, for example, hiring new employees or allocating budget (e.g. buying new equipment). Their daily tasks may vary based on the characteristics of the program they lead (e.g. number of employees, available funding, etc.).

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR DUTIES INCLUDE:

- Ensuring established sports rules are followed and respected
- Managing budgets and fundraising
- Recruiting and supervising sports staff

To create your own athletic director job description, consider what specific responsibilities and requirements you need to include.

How long does it take to become an athletic director?

There is no specific time frame to become an athletic director. Candidates should obtain all necessary skills, especially effective leadership and project management, to be promoted in this role. They mostly achieve that by completing sports internships and working as assistant managers in sports or educational settings for a few years.

JOB BRIEF
