

In the province of Alberta, if an employee gives one month notice but the employer decides to terminate immediately, is the employer required to pay one month in lieu or two weeks? The employee has been with the company for less than a year.

written by hri_Admin | May 30, 2019

In the province of Alberta, if an employee gives one month notice but the employer decides to terminate immediately, is the employer required to pay one month in lieu or two weeks? The employee has been with the company for less than a year.