

Maternity – Know The Laws Of Your Province

Maternity leave regulations are essential for protecting the rights and wellbeing of pregnant employees in the workplace. These regulations require employers to provide job-protected, unpaid leave to eligible employees before and after childbirth. Key provisions include the duration of leave, notice requirements, medical certification, and protections against dismissal due to pregnancy. Employees may also be entitled to extended leave in cases of pregnancy complications, stillbirth, or health-related issues. While general maternity leave principles are consistent across Canada, specific regulations vary by province and territory to address regional employment standards. Compliance with these regulations ensures workplace equity, supports maternal health, and promotes a fair work environment.

FEDERAL

Pregnant employees are also entitled to up to 17 weeks of maternity leave, which can begin up to 13 weeks before birth and may be extended if the child is hospitalized. Employers must ensure compliance and support employees during pregnancy and maternity.

(a) modifies her job functions or reassigns her, or

(b) informs her in writing that it is not reasonably practicable to modify her job functions or reassign her, and that pay shall for all purposes be deemed to be wages.
