Organizational Challenges in the New World of Work

Today’s organizations are operating in a time of unprecedented crises precipitated by rapidly shifting demographics, breakneck technological changes and ever increasing provincial, federal and international regulations. In the first of this three-part series, risks involving the workforce were examined. Now, in this second part, we look at the risks technology poses for the workplace.