Stronger Protection against Retaliation Under the Human Rights Code

Stronger protection against retaliation under the Human Rights Code took effect retroactively to May 14, 2015. Previously, only employees who filed or were named in a human rights complaint were protected against retaliation. Under the new law, protection extends to those who might make or be named in a complaint, provide evidence for or otherwise help with a complaint.