

The Need for an Agile Approach to Human Capital Management

The insights provided by more than 800 working Canadians show that rewards and recognition, communication and career path expectations differ across the generations. Companies that poorly manage these differences risk high turnover rates, lost revenue and missed opportunities. Technology has the potential to transform the way multiple generations work together – but can also create problems if it is not applied correctly.