

The Short Term Employment Forecast

The Short Term Employment Forecast 2014-2016 was released. It reviewed 260 occupations and considered seven variables including future and historical employment growth, unemployment, labour market opinions and other data. The Forecast predicts the following occupations (among others) to be in high demand through 2016: senior managers, sales and marketing managers, Administrative officers, civil and mechanical engineers, civil and mechanical engineering technologist and technicians, electrical and electronics engineers, electrical and electronics engineering technologists and technicians, construction estimators, computer network technicians and specialist physicians.