2. Definition

For purposes of this Policy:

“Workplace harassment” means engaging in a course of vexatious and unwelcome conduct by one employee against a co-worker, subordinate, or other employee in the workplace that the employee engaging in the conduct knows or should recognize as being unwelcome, including, but not limited to:

- Harsh and excessive criticism of a personal and non-constructive nature;
- Spreading rumours designed to harm a person’s reputation or put the person in a negative light;
- Spying or stalking;
- Ridiculing a subordinate, co-worker or other employee on the basis of physical appearance, beliefs or personal characteristics;
- Name calling and teasing;
- Pushing, shoving, elbowing, jostling and other acts of physical intimidation;
- Unwelcome practical jokes; and
- Slurs, offensive remarks or other ill treatment that would constitute discrimination on the basis of race, ethnicity, national origin, religion, age, gender, family status, disability, sexual orientation, political belief, criminal record or other grounds protected by the [province name] human rights laws.

Harassment also includes such forms of conduct that occur online, in emails and on social media websites and other digital platforms and media. Common examples of online harassment include, without limitation:

- Impersonation, or posting harassing comments, photos or other materials in somebody else's name, typically in an attempt to get that person into trouble;
- Swatting, a dangerous form of impersonation involving online threats designed to get a SWAT team to bust down the impersonated individual's door;
- Hacking, whether it's done to steal personal information, sabotage an IT network or simply harass somebody;
- Denial-of-Service (DoS) attacks, i.e., flooding a host or network until it crashes in a malicious attempt to prevent employees, customers and other legitimate users from accessing an organization's website;
- Doxxing, or collecting documents (docs) containing an individual's private information and posting them online for all the world to see and use;
- Trolling, or posting nasty and provocative things online in an attempt to upset, instigate and stir up trouble;
- Dogpiling, a form of trolling typically carried out by hundreds and even thousands of people seeking to overwhelm a website or social media page by posting negative comments on it at the same time; and
- Message bombing, which is similar to dogpiling that targets inboxes to make it impossible to respond to legitimate messages.
