

Court OKs Class Action Harassment Lawsuit Against RCMP

The Federal Court ruled that current or former RCMP Members can bring a class action lawsuit against the agency for failing to provide them a work environment free from bullying, intimidation and harassment. The class includes Members who worked for the RCMP without a collective agreement over a period beginning on Jan. 1, 1995, except for individual Members that expressly opt out of the lawsuit.

Action Point: Use the resources on the Harassment Compliance Centre to prevent harassment and bullying at your workplace